Leonardo da Vinci (1452–1519) was a true genius.

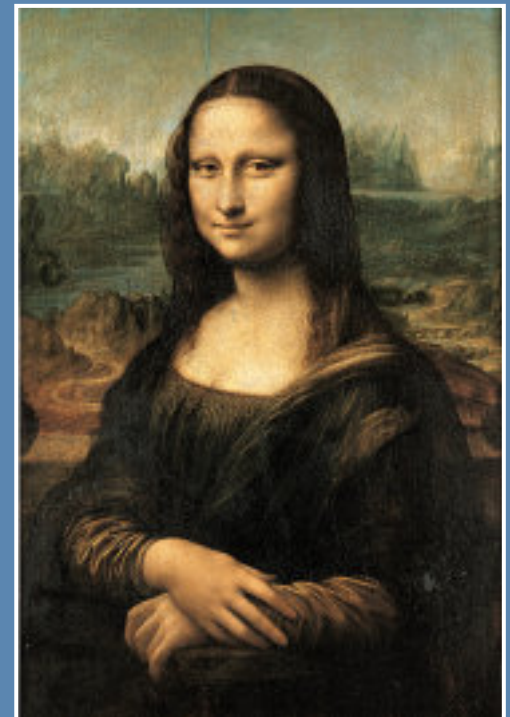

He painted the famous Mona Lisa, which you surely know. But Leonardo was not only a fantastic painter, he also had many other gifts.

This is how Leonardo drew himself.

He worked as an engineer and architect, for example, and designed fortifications and weapons for rulers. He studied human anatomy and even dissected corpses to learn more.

He was also an inventor and thought up some amazing things. His notebooks contain drawings of bicycles, cars, diving bells, and flying machines—he even invented a helicopter!
