This is Roy Lichtenstein at work.

He was born in New York around ninety years ago.

He is one of the most famous pop artists.

Pop Art is an art movement that draws its themes from the media, everyday life, and advertising.

Roy Lichtenstein became famous for his large images with their tiny Ben-Day dots and their black outlines, which look a lot like comics. This is not surprising since he often got his ideas from comics.

It took a while for his art to become successful. After studying art, he first taught college to earn enough money to support his family. He started to become famous only after a gallery owner took an interest in his comic-like figures.

In this book you'll find pictures by Roy Lichtenstein to draw on and color in.

Use the colors you like most and paint and draw on the pictures any way you like!

You definitely know these characters! Roy Lichtenstein used small pictures of Donald Duck and Mickey Mouse as models for a large painting on canvas.
